Is there Room in the Angel Land?

A short time since the author of the following lines listened to an interesting discourse by a Methodist preacher, in which he related the following touching incident: A mother who was preparing some flour to bake into bread, left it for a few minutes, when little Mary—with childish curiosity to see what it was—took hold of the dish, which fell to the floor, spilling the contents. The mother struck the child a severe blow, saying with anger, that she was always in the way! Two weeks after, little Mary sickened and died. On her death-bed, while delirious, she asked her mother if there would be room among the angels. "I was always in your way, mother—you had no room for little Mary! And will I be in the angels way? Will they have no room for me?" The broken-hearted mother then felt that no sacrifice would be too great, could she have saved her child:

Is there room among the angels
For the spirit of your child?
Will they take your little Mary
In their loving arms so mild?
Will they ever love me fondly,
As my story books have said?
Will they find a home for Mary—
Mary numbered with the dead?
Tell me truly, darling mother!
Is there room for such as me?
Will I gather buds of spirits,
And the shining angels see?

I have sorely tried you, mother—
Been to you a constant care!
And you will not miss me, mother,
When I dwell among the fair!
For you have no room for Mary—
She was ever in your way,
And she fears the good will shun her
Will they, darling mother, say?
Tell me—tell me truly, mother,
Ere life's closing hour doth come!
Do you think that they will keep me,
In the shining angels' home?

I was not so wayward, mother!
Not so very—very bad,
But that tender love would nourish,
And make Mary's heart so glad!
Oh! I yearned for pure affection,
In this world of bitter woe!
And I long for bliss immortal,
In that land where I must go!
Tell me, once again, dear mother,
Ere you take the parting kiss!
Will the angels hold me welcome
To that land of perfect bliss?

BOOTS UNDER THE BED.

Miss Lydia White had two lovers. Tom Green and Willie Jones.

Both were good-looking, well-to-do young mechanics, and both loved her devotedly, if their own vehement assertions could be credited. Lydia was in something of a dilemma concerning them.

She had no particular preference for either of them, but she wanted to be married sometime, and Mr. White was opposed to long courtships, and Aunt Jane kept assuring her that her bed and table linen would get yellow with being packed away in the bureau so long; and she also took frequent opportunities of remarking that "none of her girls ever was single after they had reached the age of eighteen; no not a mink!"

And as Lydia counted her years four more than eighteen, of course this latter insinuation of Jane's cut deeply.

Lydia turned the matter over seriously in her mind, and argued it with herself, pro and con. Which she should take, Green or Jones?

She was in some degree romantic, and she had indulged in gorgeous dreams of marrying a second Napoleon as to courage; in fact if there was any quality that she especially admired in a man, it was bravery.

When she said anything about this in the hearing of Tom or Willie, they begged to put them to the test—they would joyfully die for her if she stood in need of such a sacrifice, they assured her over and over again.

One Sunday evening, as indeed was frequently the case, Jones and Green both happened to call at Lydia's at about the same time.

Lydia went out of the room about nine o'clock on the pretence of bringing a book of engravings, but she shortly returned in great perturbation.

"What is it? What is the matter?" cried the two lovers in eager chorus.

"Oh dear me!" sighed Lydia, "such a dreadful, dreadful thing! Who would have thought in our peaceful, community! Oh, Mr. Jones, Mr! Green! You can not think how glad, how relieved I am that you are here. I should be frightened to death were it otherwise!" and she clung first to one and then to the other with a confidence perfectly infatuating.

"Tell us what it is!" cried Green.

"Enlighten us to the cause of this emotion!" said Jones, who had been to the Chicken Valley Academy two "quarters," and used some large words.

"Oh, you are both so brave!" cried Lydia admiringly—"I feel as if I were protected by an army!"

Green drew himself up to his full height, which was just five feet, and it must be confessed that beside the Herculean Jones, he looked like a Bantam rooster beside a Shanghae.

"Command me!" said Green, "only let me do your bidding!"

"Ask my existence," said Jones, "and it shall be given free as the streams give to the sounding ocean."

"Hush!" cried Lydia, "don't speak so loud! He may hear you, and take the alarm and kill us all before you have a chance to capture him."

"He? who? what? demanded Jones in a tragic whisper.

"Hush! for pity's sake," said Lydia, "he's up stairs in the spare room!—Under the bed! Father had a hundred dollars paid him yesterday for a cow, and this is a plan to rob the house. I saw his boots stick out from under the counterpane."

"Good heavens!" cried Green, getting behind Jones.

"And such big boots too," said Lydia—"twelves I am sure!"

"Jupiter! what a giant he must be!" said Jones.

"Tom! oh, Willie! protect me!" cried Lydia pathetically, and they both protested that they would shield her with the last drop of their blood.

"Then go up stairs and seize the villain," said Lydia.

"You had better go first," said Jones "I—don't know the way."

"Nor I," said Green, "and you're the biggest; it belongs to you to lead on."

"I will show you the way," said Lydia.

And the two gallant young men reluctantly followed her up stairs. She opened the door of the spare chamber softly, and they saw the boots very distinctly; a most extremely dirty pair of cowhides, which looked as tho' their owner had tramped through 20 miles of swamp, and made no acquaintance with rugs or scrapers afterward.

"A—a mighty big man he must be, with such a pair of feet," said Jones. "Hadn't we better call your father and Mr. Berry, the hired man?"

"I think we had," said Green timidly.

"I don't," said Lydia, decidedly.—"See! I believe the boots are moving. Oh, goodness me!"

And, as she screamed, Jones and Green simultaneously made a rush for the chamber door. Jones stumbled over a wash-stand and went head long to the foot of the stairs, wash-stand and all. And Lydia, by clinging to the skirts of Mr. Green's coat, kept him from following his rival.

"What in the deuce is to pay here?" asked Jack Berry, appearing on the scene in his shirt and trowsers, and his curly light hair standing out all over his head, like the bristles on a lamp chimney brush.

Lydia points to the boots.

"Don't touch him," whined Green. "He may have a pistol or something about him, and hurt somebody."

"Let a chicken-hearted wholly! cried Berry, "you're afraid to see what's behind the boots, are ye? Wall, I'll show you."

And Berry seized the frightful objects and gave a pull so strong that he went over backwards on the floor, with a boot in either hand.

"Jupiter!" he cried, "I never saw any boots come off so easy as that are. Let's see the feet." And diving under the bed he lifted the counterpane and displayed—nothing."

"But where is the owner of the boots?" cried he, scratching his nose and looking initely puzzled.

"Here!" said Pa White, appearing at the door, "I'm the owner, and he's I've been hearing this drafted noise for the last ten minutes, and thinking there was a fire over to the corner.—But a sign of my boots could I find.—Who put 'em there, Lyddy?"

But Lydia was bathing Berry's nose Green and Jones had sense enough to see that they were de trop.

And they took their departure without any very elaborate farewells.

"By jinks," said Green to Jones, on their way home, "I've got an idea; it's my opinion that jade of a girl put them boots there herself, on purpose to try us."

"Of course she did," said Jones, sullily; "women are as deceitful as the devil."

The District Schoolmaster.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

There is one man in this basement world, that I alwuz look upon with mixt feelins ov pity and respect.

Pity and respect, as a general mixtur, don't mix well.

You will find them both traveling round among folks, but not often growing on the same bush.

Why do they hug each other, they mean sumthing.

Pity, without respect, haint got much more oats in it than disgust haz.

I would rather a man would hit me on the side of the head, than tew pity me.

But there is one man in this world to whom I alwuz take oph my hat, and remain uncovered until he gets safely by, and that is the distrikt schoolmaster.

When I meet him I look upon him az a martyr just returned from the stake, or on hiz way there tew be cooked.

He leads a more lonesum and single life than an old bachelor, and a more anxious one than an old maid.

He is remarked just about as long and as affectionately as a gide board is by a traveling pack pedlar.

If he undertakes to make his scholars luv him, the chances are he will neglect their larning; and if he don't lick them now and then pretty often, they will soon lick him.

The distrikt schoolmaster hain't got a friend on the flat side of the earth. The boys snowball him during recess; the girls put water in hiz hair die; and the school committee makes him work for half the money a bartender gets and board him round naberhood, where they give him rhy coffee, sweetened with molasses, tew drink, and kodfish bawls three times a day for vittles.

And with all this abuse, I never heard ov a distrikt schoolmaster swearing anything louder than—condem it.

Don't talk to me about the pashunce ov anshunt Job. Job had pretty plenty ov biles all over him, no doubt, but they were all ov one breed.

Every yung one in a distrikt skool is a bile ov a different breed, and each one needs a different kind ov poultiss to get a good head on them.

A distrik school master, who does a squire job, and takes his codfish bawls reverently, iz a better man today, to have living around loose, than Solomon would be, arrayed in all hiz glory.

Solomon wuz better at writing proverbs and managing a large family than he would be tew navigate a distrikt skoolhouse.

Enny man who has kept a distrikt skool for ten years, and borded around the naberhood, ought to be made a mager ginural, and have a ponshun for the rest of his natral days, and a hoss and waggin tew do his going around in.

But as a general consequence, a distrikt schoolmaster hain't got any mor warm friends than old blind ox haz.

He iz just about az welkum as a tax collector iz.

He iz respectid a good deal az a man to whom we owe a debt uv over fifty dollars to, and we don't want to pay.

He goes through life on a back road az a wood sled, and finally iz missed, but whatever becums uv hiz remains I kant tell.

Fortunately he iz not often a sensitive man; if he wuz he cooden't any more keep a distrikt skool than he could file a kross-cut-saw.

Whi iz it that men and wimmim who pashuntly and with crazed brain teach our remorseless brats the tejus meaning uv the alphabet, who take the fust wedin step uv their destinys, who have to lay the stepping-stones and enkurrage them to mount upward who hev done more hard and mean work than enny klass uv men on the footstool, who hev prayed over the reprobate, strengthened the timid, restrained the outrageous, and flattered the imbecile, who hev lived on kodfish and coffee, and hain't been heard to swear—whi iz it that they are treated like a vagrant fiddler danced to for a night, paid oph in the morning, and eagerly forgotten?

I had rather burn a koal-pit, or keep the flys out uv a butcher's shop in the month of August, than meddle with the skool business.

A Talk with Five of Brigham Young's Daughters.

Our conversation was interrupted by a ring of the door-bell, and shortly afterward several young ladies entered, who were introduced as the Misses Louisa, Dora and Nabby Young, Mrs. Emily Clawson and Mrs. Fanny Thatcher. Mrs. Benson and her daughters now wished us good-day and withdrew. These ladies are all daughters of Brigham Young. Mrs. Emily Clawson had been married to Hiram Clawson, Brigham's confidential clerk and superintendent of the Co-operative Society, about two years and is a fourth wife. Alice, another of Brigham's daughters and Emily's half sister, is Clawson's third wife. He maintains his wives in comforts, ease and even elegance; from which it is fair to presume he would not have much difficulty in procuring Young wives. Emily is a tall, slim young lady, with fine, regular features, and apparently about twenty-two or three years of ago. Mrs. Fanny Thatcher also married her half-sister's husband. George Thatcher had, several years ago, married Luna, the oldest daughter of Brigham's first wife.

Miss Lousia is quite young, apparently about seventeen, short and stout. Miss Nabby is much the same in figure, but taller than her sisters. Miss Dora is the prettiest looking, and has the best figure of either of the others. Mr. James Hardy, an actor in Brigham's theatre, is trying to persuade her that matrimony is a very pleasant institution, but so far without success. Miss Dorp is about seventeen years of age. Louisa and Nabb are said to be partial to flirtations with Gentiles, and may be seen most any fine day, fashionably attired, promenading Main street, casting sly glances at the clerks, Jew, Gentile or Saint, who make their appearance in the store doors to look at them. During last winter young Gentiles and young saintesses mingled together promiscuously upon the ice, which, as it often levels all distinctions, placed them upon a common footing After the affair of M'Govern and Miss Zina Pratt, Brigham became alarmed, and prohibited any of his family from appearing upon the skating pond. Notwithstanding this prohibition, however, when Brigham left town skates were donned and Brigham's daughters flew swiftly over the ice in company with their masculine friends. I asked Louisa if she intended to skate this winter. "I am going to if I can," she replied, "though pa thinks it is perfectly awful for us girls to go on the ice and skate. I don't see what makes him think so; for my part, I like it first-rate although I got bumped pretty hard while learning." Nabby is considered the best skater in the city.—Salt Lake City Cor. N. Y. World.

A True Incident.

On a bright summer morning, a young teacher might have been seen wending her way toward a small but neat and pleasant school-house, situated in one of the interior districts of this State. Any one would have been struck with her childish appearance; for scarce sixteen years had passed over her head, yet was she impressed with a deep sense of the responsibility of her calling. Bright young faces at the school-house windows grew brighter at her approach, and as she entered the school-room, the hushed silence plainly showed that she possessed there an authority such as neither age nor stature can attain unaccompanied by an even, firm, and moderate disposition. She opened the Book of books, read a few verses, and after a short, appropriate prayer, commenced her day's labor.

After the day exercises are closed, school is dismissed. The "good nights" are repeated, and the children may be seen leaving the school-house—all save one, a little boy of about ten summers. He has told a lie! The teacher's usual happy smile has vanished, and as the boy boldly returns her searching gaze and questions, with repeated denials of his guilt, her heart becomes painfully oppressed, and she raises an inward prayer to Heaven for guidance.—But as she tries to awaken in his heart some compunction of conscience, she feels that almost a herculean task, for the boy had been taught to utter untruths by a mother! She leaves nothing unsaid which she thinks can awaken penitence, but all is in vain. The boy will not confess, but by repeated denials adds falsehood to falsehood. She goes to her Bible, and while she is speaking kind and tender words to the erring boy, searches out all those texts of Scripture that refer to lying, holds the holy book before him, and bids him read.

As the boy reads the threatening against the liar, his lips quiver and his voice grows tremulous with emotion. But an evil impulse triumphs, and tho' he dares not now raise his eyes, as he did before, he says, with a faltering voice, "I did not tell that lie." The teacher, feeling that she has done all she can, tells him he may go. But she says, "I know the great struggle in your heart, Charley; I know how wretched you feel, and how you will wish, even before you get home, that you had told the truth. Listen, now, Charley, while you are going home, I will be praying that God will give you strength even to turn back and come to me with a confession. Then we can ask His forgiveness.

The boy was gone. With a sorrowful heart the teacher prays earnestly that the young child may not be left to perish; for she feels that he is already almost beyond hope. But suddenly, as she remembers that He to whom she is praying, is perfect in justice, as well as in mercy, she grows calm, and says, "Father, not my will, but thine be done." Then, almost involuntarily, she looks in the direction in which the boy had gone, when lo! he is coming back. With inexpressible joy she meets him at the door, and with breathless interest listens. Pale, and trembling with his big effort, he says, "I told that lie," and burst into tears. The Bible had conquered. Such is the power of the Word of God.

MATERNAL JOYS.—An exchange perpetrates the following scandal:

"Ba-a-a-a, ba-a-a-a!" shrieked a half naked infant, of about eighteen months o'd.

"What's the matter with mamma's thweet little duckey?" says the affectionate mother, while she presses it to her bosom, and the young serpent, in return, digs its talons into her face.

"Da', den, Missus, I know what little Master Sim wants," exclaimed the cherub's negro nurse.

"You black huzzy, why didn't you tell me, then?" and the infuriated mother gives Dinah a punch in the chops with her shoe.

"Why, he wants to put his foot into dat pan ob graby," whimpered the unfortunate darkey.

"Well, why don't you bring it here, you aggravating nigger?" replied the mother of the bawling little one.

Dinah brings the pan with the gravy, and little Sim put his bare feet into it, and dashes the milk-warm grease about his sweet little shanks, to the infinite gratification of his mamma, who tenderly exclaimed, "Did mamma's little Simmy want to put his teeny weeny tooties in the gravy? It shall paddle in the pan 'as it soysey voosey's, and then it shall have its poozey red frock on, and go and see its pappy pappy."

A CAUTION TO MOTHERS.—A distinguished physician of Paris declared just before his death, "I believe that during the twenty-six years that I have practiced my profession in this city, 20,000 children have been borne to the cemeteries, a sacrifice to the absurd custom of naked arms."

"Boston," adds Dr. Warren, "sacrifices 500 babies every year by not clothing their arms." What these little arms need is thick, knit, woolen sleeves, extending from the hand to the shoulder. The extremities require as much clothing as the body. Women should dress their arms and legs in woolen of some kind. The absurdity of loose flowing sleeves and wide-spread skirts worn in our climate hardly needs to be discussed.

☞ "Why don't your father take a newspaper?" said a man to a little boy whom he caught pilfering his paper from his door-steps. "Cos he sends me to take it," answered the urchin.

☞ The young lady who never played at home, played out.

The Globe.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

Wednesday morning, Jan. 12, 1870

WM. LEWIS, HUGH LINDSAY, } EDITORS.

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

☞We are pleased to note that Gov. Geary has appointed Gen. A. L. Russell Adjutant General, in place of D. B. McCreary, who resigned to accept a seat in the Legislature. Gen. Russell was Gov. Curtin's Adjutant General during the rebellion, in which position he proved a most efficient officer. We congratulate Gov. Geary upon his good fortune in getting so good an adjutant, and Gen. Russell upon his appointment.

☞From the manner in which the Legislature starts out, we are naturally lead to believe that some reforms will be carried out during the winter. Several resolutions have been offered which, if they do not receive the usual white-washing will have a salutary effect. We suspend judgment until we have something more definite in regard to these proposed reforms, as we are inclined to the opinion that they are only the usual budget of buncombe got up as a blind at the beginning of every session.

☞The Legislature thus far refuses to publish the Legislative Record, a publication which annually costs large sums of the people's money, and which is of no earthly use except to disseminate the buncombe balderdash of the members, which nobody ever reads, and which is used principally for wrapping paper by country store keepers. We trust the members will not have occasion to change their minds before the end of the week.—The Journals as kept by the clerks of both Houses are all that is necessary for all practical purposes. Stick!

SECRETARY TREASURER.—The contest over the State Treasury, which was one of the most exciting and bitter fights we have had for years, was virtually ended on Friday by a joint caucus of Republicans, which resulted in a vote of 50 for Mackey and 8 for Irwin—twenty Republicans being absent or refusing to go into the caucus. It is asserted by some that the absence from the caucus of the twenty means a bolt, whilst Mackey's friends are jubilant and say the thing is fixed and Mackey will be Treasurer for another year.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.—We present the Governor's message to our readers to-day in an extra sheet. It is a clear, able and forcible document, and should be read by every intelligent citizen in the Commonwealth.—The Governor's views on the State Treasury accord with our own exactly. While we commend the message as a whole, we may be allowed to suggest that it would have served its purpose equally as well, if the Cuban question and that of our National finances had been "let alone," whilst the Governor's views about Cuba are those of nine-tenths of the American people, yet they are in direct conflict with the policy of the National Administration. But read the message.

☞"Dad" of the Globe thinks a man who bolted part of a ticket once in his lifetime is "too fresh" to express an opinion on the Congressional nomination.—Cremer.

Asking the "posish" for one of your kind is a little more than expressing an opinion. The Republican party is an organization to keep Democracy and Rebels out of power—you repudiated the Republican organization and have not yet returned to it. When you can come back like a repentant rebel and show by your works that you intend to behave better, true Republicans may listen to your opinions, but until then your opinions will have no weight with men who work for the success of the Republican party. As to your bolting a part of a ticket once in your lifetime, we question. We know that for several years when you were not holding office, you were not counted anywhere—you were out of politics—at least you were not counted "in" when there was work or party expenses on hand.

☞Cremer thinks we have been a political "weather-cock." Let us see what we have been. From the spring of '46 to the commencement of the war we published the Globe as a Democratic paper. During the war we stood by the Union party and defended Lincoln and Johnson, its nominees, until Johnson went over to the Democracy—then without a party we took an outside seat until the Republican party re-organized and nominated our candidate Gen. Grant for President, and there we have been ever since, supporting every nominee of the party, whilst Cremer and his guerrilla clan have been working to defeat Republican nominees. We are just as old a Republican as the Grant Republican party, and we have been true to its organization and nominees, which is more than Cremer can say for himself and his backers, and yet he wants to be considered our political equal, and his guerrilla associates the political equals of any other Republicans in the district. Cremer is too much of an old fogy to see himself as true party Republicans see him. He is "too fresh" to give an honest Republican opinion—indeed he has not yet come out from the foul party.

The Guerrilla Secret League.

At last we have the positive evidence of the existence of a secret political organization in this county, and the secret of the success of the guerrillas in the late campaign is no longer a mystery. There is no use denying any longer that hundreds of Republicans had the wool pulled over their eyes by the secret programme of the Chief of the secret league, and influenced to work in the interest of the secret organization. Mr. Scott was put forward by a secret political organization to fight an imaginary secret political organization said to exist under the control of Mr. Woods, but of the existence of such an organization we have not yet had any man's say that we could believe. Robert McDivitt, editor of the Journal & American, in a reply to Cremer and the organ of Orlady's secret political league, in his last week's issue, makes the following expose:

"Some of them, [Cremer's lies,] however, are rather amusing; for instance to cover up the difficulty presented by the Henry Shearer affidavit by saying that it was an attempt to initiate him into the Union League. This is an old dodge which we were familiar with some time ago, and might do to tell any person who had never been 'in,' but will not serve to "pull the wool" over the eyes of any one who had been inside of both organizations. We have been in the Union League and the OTHER ALSO, and know all about BOTH. But Mr. Cremer is willing to undertake to lie his friends out of the one, as it does not suit him at present, and consequently the affidavit of Mr. Shearer is of no account. We can see no imaginable difference between the statements of Henry Shearer and Judge Leas—both gentlemen of high standing and character—so far as importance may be attached to either. They were each invited, it seems, into different organizations, and neither of them initiated. We were never into the one Judge Leas speaks of, and cannot say anything about it experimentally, while we were INVITED AND INITIATED into the one Mr. Shearer speaks of, and IT WAS NOT THE UNION LEAGUE, but a secret political organization, of which Dr. Orlady was the head, and of which John Scott is now supposed to be the body, and Theo. H. Cremer the tail. As to conceiling or denying the existence of any secret league we leave our readers to judge."

What more do the honest and true Republican voters of the county want to satisfy them of the existence of a secret political guerrilla organization with Orlady as its head and Cremer's Republican as its organ? Will true, Republicans be deceived a second time by such a band of disorganizers? Can men who have acted and are still acting a prominent part with such an organization be considered and recognized as the equals of Republicans who refused to desert their party organization and unite with Democrats to defeat Republican nominees? Mr. McDivitt was initiated into the guerrilla league and he knows all about it, but couldn't go with it over to the Democracy in the late campaign.

Surveyor General's Report.

We have received from Gen. Jacob M. Campbell, a copy of his annual report for 1869, for which he will please accept our thanks.

Under Gen. Campbell's administration, the Surveyor General's Report has become one of the most valuable and interesting public documents issued from the departments at Harrisburg. He gives a clear, able, dignified and satisfactory detailed statement of the operations of the Department during the year, and then follows it with a table showing the amount of purchase money, interest and fees collected, for which work has been done. The report also contains an appendix, giving the different Acts under which the "land lien dockets" were prepared and sent out, the dates at which they were forwarded to the prothonotaries of the several counties, regulations relative to issuing patents, the meetings of the Board of Property, instructions to County Surveyors concerning their duties as such, prices of lands in Pennsylvania under William Penn, also under the Commonwealth at various periods, tables showing the price of land, from one up to five hundred acres, the different forms required in the transaction of business with the Department, a tabular statement giving the population [in 1860] square miles and number of acres in the several counties, together with the names, latitude and longitude of the County Seats, the names and date, day, month and year of the erection of the several counties of the Commonwealth and the territory from which they were formed, a list of the County Surveyors, besides other valuable and useful matter of historical interest.

A FEW counterfeit coupons recently made their way into the United States Treasurer's office. The discovery made quite a flutter in financial circles, and General Spinner highly complimented his lady clerks in making such an important discovery. The counterfeit coupons were returned to the points from which they came, even, in some instances, to Europe, with statements that they would not be redeemed, as they were not genuine.

THE case of Dr. Schoeppe was called for argument in the Supreme Court on Monday, and was postponed until the first Monday in February, in consequence of a statement of Attorney General Brewster, that neither the prisoner's counsel nor the District Attorney would be ready to proceed before the 22d inst.

GEN. A. L. RUSSELL has been appointed by Governor Geary to be Adjutant General of Pennsylvania, in place of Hon. M. McCleary, of Erie, who resigned to accept a seat in the House.

The State Treasurer.

Governor Geary, in his message, confirms the suspicions of many well-informed men that the Treasurers of our State have been in the habit of loaning out the moneys of the Commonwealth to banks, or private bankers, or to others, and thereby realizing enormous gains. Although the salary of the Treasurer is only $1700, the Governor alleges that "there are but few men who have held this office, however poor they may have been when they took charge of it, who have not become rich." He also plainly intimates that these fortunes are acquired by the "unlawful use of the State funds, and subsidies that dare not be revealed to the public, because they are positively prohibited by law, under penalties of no ordinary magnitude." The Governor has, perhaps, more information upon this subject which it would be better if he would make known, so that the full extent of the fraud, if any has been committed, should be known by every tax-payer.

The recent excited contest for the State Treasureship meant something, and that meaning is significant. Why should there be such a scrambling after such an insignificant salary as $1700? The Governor tells the secret when he says that those who have held the office have become "rich." The Governor having been bold enough to speak his sentiments, it is now time for our Legislature to profit by his suggestions, and work about a reform. The people know the surplus in the Treasury is appropriated to the aggrandizement of the official in charge, and not for the good of the State, and they will demand, sooner or later, that that sort of dealing be ended.

A Child Shot while Walking with his Mother.

We take the following from the Pittsburg Commercial of Monday. It relates a very distressing case of shooting, resulting from the practice of using fire-arms in the public streets:

A lady named Mrs. Neuman, while walking along Fifth avenue, having by the hand a little boy aged four years, was startled by the report of a pistol, which had been fired off close to her. She was still more alarmed when her child began to scream, as if it had been shot. The first impression was that it had been only frightened, but its writhings soon showed that it had been injured. Mrs. Neuman soon observed blood running over the child's shoes, and fearing the worst, began to scream and wring her hands in anguish. Mr. J. C. Smith noticed three boys passing just a moment before the shooting, one of whom had a pistol in his hand. He had passed out of sight when the shot was fired, and the loudness of the report attracted his notice. The boys were rather rough in appearance, and were fourteen or fifteen years of age. The last glimpse that Mr. Smith got of the pistol impressed him with the belief that the weapon had been aimed at something, as the motion of the hand indicated that it was about to be discharged. The screams of the mother, at the sight of the blood, induced Mr. Smith to run out of his store and open the little fellow's cloak and bursting his breast the bullet hole was apparent. The ball had entered the left breast, passing entirely through the body and coming out at the back.

The mother, almost frantic with grief, took the child in her arms and ran with him to Abel's drug store, a few yards distant. Dr. Wishart was then summoned, and stated that the ball had passed through the left lung. He dressed the wounds, but expressed fears that death would result from internal bleeding. After the dressing, the child was removed to the residence of its parents. The name of the boy who did the shooting is unknown, but he should be hunted up, and his conduct investigated. Dr. Wishart yesterday reported the child in as favorable a condition as could be hoped for. There was internal hemorrhage, but not to any great extent. The prospects of recovery, however, are by no means flattering.

IMPORTANT TO PEDESTORS.—It is not generally known, that there is an Act of the Pennsylvania Legislature providing that no estate shall be bequeathed, devised, or conveyed to any body politic, or to any person, in trust for religious or charitable uses, except the same be done by deed or will at least one month before the decease of the testator or alienor. It is an important provision, and persons who contemplate charitable bequests should prepare their wills in season. We have recently noticed several instances in which such bequests have failed, because of the wills not being executed a month prior to death of the parties. Last month Mrs. Sophia Moylin died in Lancaster, bequeathing $1,000 to Trinity Luth. Church, and $10,000 to Zion's Lutheran Church. Both bequests are void, because the will was executed less than thirty days before her death. Not long ago, Henry Lawson, of Norristown, died with a bequest of a large amount of money to a Philadelphia association, which failed for the same reason.

GREAT joy was manifested among many of the rebels in certain Southern localities, when hearing of the death of Secretary Stanton, and it was the signal of the letting loose of the worst passions. It seems that so long as the present generation lives, so long will there exist a bitter animosity against the principal defenders of the Union.

THE Massachusetts Legislature convened on the 5th inst., and immediately after the election of a President of the Senate and a Speaker of the House the members were escorted to the Old Dutch church, where they heard a sermon. This is truly a model Legislature.

THE telegraph operators of the Western Union line, from California to Maine, struck last week, on account of injustice done to several operators in San Francisco in reducing their wages. They resolved to cease operating until their offended brethren were satisfied.

WHEN will silly superstition cease? The latest in this line comes from Ohio. It is said that old coffin nails are sold for fifty cents apiece in Dayton, the purchasers believing that they will cure toothache, earache and headache.

Wonderful Case of Suspended Animation in St. Louis.

Saint Louis is in a state of great excitement over the case of Mr. Heitkamp. The Republican of January 3d has the following particulars:—

The fifth day has elapsed since the body of Mr. Heitkamp passed into a comatose condition, resembling death, and yet there is no change in the color of his features, the touch of his flesh, other than a small degree of unnatural coldness. His eyes are closed as if closed in sleep, and in fact, if the body was taken out of the coffin and placed on a bed, and then shown to persons ignorant of the circumstances, they would most unquestionably declare the man was in a deep sleep.—There is no softening of the flesh, no indications whatever of putrefaction. There is an entire absence of that odor that is alone peculiar to a dead human body. The fingers and wrist joints are still flexible, while there is an absence of deathly stiffness from the neck joints. These facts, at the expiration of the fifth day from the time it was supposed he died, surround the case with great and increasing interest, and many are heard declaring that the man cannot be dead. If it is not death, then what is it? So far no reasonable satisfactory explanation, neither for the absence of the usual attendants of death, (putrefaction etc.) if he be dead, nor of outward evidences of animation, if he, indeed, be living, have been given, and the quotation—

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform,"

Occurs to the mind as often as the case is mentioned. He may be dead, and yet may be alive. At a late hour last night, a majority of the people conversant with the case inclined to the latter opinion, and were quite free in so expressing themselves.

There are accounts on record of the opening of graves long years after burial, when the bodies, once clothed in flesh, were found in such a position as to indicate clearly that they had turned over. How did they get in that position? Many years ago, an English countess apparently died. Her body was placed in a vault. It was known that she wore on her fingers some valuable jewelry. A few nights after the vault was broken open, an attempt made to slip the rings from her fingers, but they would not pass the joints. The fiends or robbers, in order to accomplish their purpose, cut one of the fingers off. The blood started, and in less time than it takes to write it, the Countess rose in her coffin, and was finally restored to her family and friends and lived for many years. Was her condition when placed in the vault the same as that in which Mr. Heitkamp is now lying, or his like here? There are other instances where persons were supposed to have died, and were clothed and coffined for burial, and yet revived and lived for many years. They stated, after recovery, that they were fully cognizant of all that was going on around them, but yet were powerless—palsied in every natural function, except thought. Just such an instance was described by Mr. Heitkamp to his daughter Josephine, as occurring to him in a dream. He was robed in the habiliments of death, coffined and carried to the church. There the power of consciousness and action returned. Can it be that there is to be a full verification of this strange dream? that some unaccountable and inexplicable agency is at work in this case for the accomplishment of a strange purpose?

It is the fixed determination of the immediate relatives of Mr. Heitkamp to retain his body from burial until there are unmistable evidences that putrefaction has commenced. Then, and not till then, will the body be removed from the room in which it now lies.

The atmosphere of the room in which the body lies is not at all cold. There is a large stove in the adjoining room and the communicating door is kept open.

YOUTHFUL DEPRAVITY.—Crime is epidemic, and youth as well as age has caught the infection. The examples of rascality now so numerous among men of high estate, are finding bold imitators in young boys. Parents should look after their children closer in these times than they have been wont, because the temptations to fall into the evil ways are more numerous than formerly. Young boys are easily tempted, and are poor judges between right and wrong, and the slightest influence is apt to turn a good boy into the path of evil, from which he may not be able to extricate himself for the balance of his life. How important, then, that the earliest impressions should be in the right direction. The worst thing that can befall a boy is to have liberty to stay out at night. This is too often a fatal privilege, because it is during the hour of night that all mischief is planned and consummated, and the boy who goes "for the fun of the thing," with others who go to commit depredations upon valuables, may himself be the party, in earnest, the next time, and become a gallows' bird in after times. Boys are naturally well disposed. An impolite boy, if properly approached, is hard to find on our streets; but as we have said, their minds receive impressions as easily as wax, and unless great care is taken with them, they may as readily receive bad as good impressions.

CHICAGO evidently takes its whisky straight, for Mr. Jussen, Collector of Internal Revenue at that city, reports that the taxes collected by him on distilled spirits alone, for the 7 months of 1868 ending November 30, amounted to $1,233,657 20.

Terrible Scene on Board of a British Steamer.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Dec. 10.

A sad accident has happened to the British steamer Twinkling Star, late American steamer Estrella, which left this port on the 20th ultimo for Cape Hayti, with a valuable cargo on board. At about 9 o'clock on Saturday, the 27th ult., when about fifty miles from St. Nicholas, and about 9 o'clock at night the engineers discovered that the iron plates about midships, and in front of the paddle-wheels, had been strained from the heavy seas through which she was passing, and that large volumes of water were coming into the hold of the vessel, through cracks on either side, below the water-mark. Some of the passengers on board were advised of this, and gradually the passengers and crew were overtaken by a panic, when there was a rush to the boat, which was speedily lowered, and into it escaped the United States Consul of this port, Mr. Aaron Gregg, and several others. But the lowering of this boat was so badly managed, in the effort of every one to save himself, that the bow of the boat was elevated out of the water, while the stern was submerged in the foam which left the paddle-wheels; but they managed at last to cut the rope, and so disentangled them from the steamer. No sooner had this life boat parted from the ship than a panic overtook the fireman and others who were left on board, and the scene when the firemen forsook the furnaces, the oilmen the engines, the stewards the kitchens, the captain took leave of his senses, was perfectly hellish. The panic-stricken crew seeing that the life-boat had left them believed that the ship was about ready to part and ready to founder, and just at this critical moment Mr. Thomas Lewis, the second engineer, and the only American citizen on board, seeing every post deserted and all hands flying in the jaws of death, rushed upon the deck, and with a voice of thunder and thrilling earnestness, addressed himself to them in this wise:—"Halloo there! where are you, who call yourselves Englishmen? who fly from your stations when there is a little bit of danger, and call yourselves men, and Englishmen? Come back to your places—I am not afraid! I'll stake my life, and back all I have, that I will take this vessel into port with perfect safety—if you but do your duty." Then turning to the captain, he said:—"You, captain, you've lost your head, and allowed these cowardly fellows—these lazy landlubbers, who call themselves English—to take your senses from you. Go up to your place on the hurricane-deck, and order the wheelman back to his place." (Turning again to the fireman, who stood with their bags ready to quit the ship)—"Go back to your places, and do your duty, and if we are to die, let us die like brave men, and not as cowards! I am but a young man yet, and do you think I am going unnecessarily to risk my life? And I have a young wife and a little family in Jamaica, and do you think I am going to leave them to want? Not a bit of it. I mean to go back there, and not to run away in a little emergency like this." Then addressing Mr. Nathan, a solicitor, who was buckling on a life belt, said:—"Take that off, sir; not the slightest necessity for any nonsense of that kind. You stand by me, and everything will go well." And that little American citizen, Mr. Lewis, so inspired confidence into the whole panic stricken crew, that they resumed their places, and carried the steamer successfully into the harbor of St. Nicholas Mole, and I am informed by Mr. Nathan, a passenger on board, that had it not been for the courage and presence of mind of this second engineer, the steamer must have foundered, and all hands lost, whereas the steamer was safely conducted into one of the best habors in the world, without her cargo having been damaged to the extent of a single shilling. The cargo was valued at £10,000. The life-boat got into the port a few hours after the steamer and Mr. Consul Gregg, with the other passengers, came on to this port in the American schooner Lady Woodbury, of Portland, Maine, performing the voyage of over two hundred and seventy miles in a little less than 24 hours.

Saxe dropped the gun, when Finnegan picked it up, and beat Saxe almost to death. Both parties were intoxicated.

Country Preachers.

Why is it that everybody knows the town preacher? He can't walk along the street without the boys point him out to their new comrades and tell them he is the preacher. The shy young girl sees him and at once an irrepressible thought rises in her brain, and she imagines herself beside some nice young man with that self-same preacher standing before them, and pronouncing the words that make them unassunderable (?). The marriageable young man sees the preacher and wonders if he will live to take part in the ceremony hymenial, and receive that little remuneration from him.—The local preacher is not only known but respected by almost everybody.—This respect is not confined to one denomination, but all classes, good and bad, show their appreciation of his merits. True, in ages past this was not the case; but we let the dead past bury its dead, and talk only of the present. Now, the local preacher is somebody. The blasphemous man holds his tongue when he sees the preacher coming; the loud mouthed man subdues his voice as he passes; and the romping girl assumes a dignified air in his presence. This is all right, when it is a mark of respect and not of fear; but we don't think any preacher is vain enough to appreciate the respect that is impelled by a man fearing spirit.

The preacher, notwithstanding the great respect that is shown him, is placed in no very enviable light by his calling. He is expected to be a model of perfection, a pattern of godliness and a living example of the faith. He is expected to be an eloquent speaker, a visiting pastor, and a diligent worker. If a lecturer comes to town, at once somebody draws a comparison between him and the preacher; if anybody gets sick the preacher must be there; and if a church is to be built, or a subscription to be raised, or the membership to be increased, nobody is expected to work harder than the preacher. Indeed, too many think the preacher is the only one to work, while as for them, if they go to church as often as they can and be as good as they can, they are all right for heaven. It may be a source of gratification to such people to see their church improve materially and spiritually, but we can not see where their share of credit is to come from. Take the preacher, all in all, and he is an institution in our midst that is indispensable to its moral welfare, and the only wonder is that he does not receive a higher pecuniary reward for his services, when he proves himself deserving of it.

The following is a true account of an actual occurrence that happened about two weeks ago in this place:—On the evening in question we were invited by a young man to go to his room, which invitation we accepted.—Accordingly we were ushered into a well furnished room, and one that is as orderly as could be expected from its occupancy by two young bachelors.—On our going in, the fire was discovered to have gone out, with the exception of a few coals. One of the young men, hearing it said that coal-oil was a good thing to start a fire, immediately went for the lamp, and, reckless of consequences, poured some of the contents on the coals. There was a big flame, of course, but it soon died, and things looked as they did before.—More coal-oil was put on. The same result was reached. We suggested to take out the coal and put in wood.—Here was more trouble. No kindling about the room but a single segar-box, and that a small one. It was consigned to the stove, on top of the coal, more coal oil put on, and another flame was the result, which of course lasted a little longer. The boys were getting desperate, now, and one of them took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, went for the shovel, poured some coal oil on it, set it on fire, and held it under the coal. Now they thought they had it, sure, for what kind of coal is it that wouldn't ignite with coal oil under it, and kindling on top of it? The boys were of course doomed to disappointment, and when we left at a late hour, they were still hugging that stove, which they had been hugging for two mortal and vexatious hours, and when we looked in the stove, all that the coal oil and segar-box had done was to ignite two or three more coals, which were burning poorly. We could suggest nothing more for their good, gave them a word of pity, and left.

McCONAUGHY'S HEAD.—About fifteen years ago, a man named McConaughy killed five persons in Huntingdon county—an entire family, excepting the husband and father, who escaped with a slight gunshot wound in the ear. The family was named Brown. McConaughy was married to a daughter of the family, and his motive for the commission of the deed was to obtain possession of a miserable little farm belonging to Brown, which would fall to his (McConaughy's) wife in the event of the extermination of the Brown race. The fiend was tried for murder and convicted. He stoutly denied his guilt, even after the rope was around his neck on the day of execution. The drop fell, and owing to some defect in its manufacture, the rope broke, and McConaughy fell to the ground not much hurt. He then confessed that he was the murderer of the family. He was strung up again and hanged till he was dead. His body went to the doctors for dissection.—His head fell into the possession of a doctor who shall be nameless. This doctor died afterward, and his effects were disposed of at public sale.—Among other things sold was this head. It was bid off by a gentleman now living in Ebensburg, and can be seen by the curious upon applying at the proper quarter.—Allegheneian.

Broad Top Items.

Our correspondent "Veritas" sends us the following items from Broad Top:

Business has been brisk. Liquor stores did amazingly well, as was proven by the number of inebriated persons in the streets, hatless, coatless, and in glorious humor.

The Dudley colliery, owned and worked by D. Blair, Esq., of Huntingdon, has been leased to Mr. Josiah M. Bacon, of Philadelphia. We hope Mr. Maher, overseer for Mr. Blair, will not be removed. He is a competent and faithful officer, and a good and trustworthy citizen.

Measles has been introduced into this and adjoining townships.

The congregation of the R. C. Church has not definitely settled on a location for their new church. Over $1000 has already been subscribed; they worship now in an ox-store room.

I hope all readers had a merry Christmas and happy New Year. If they would be happier yet, let them enclose and remit $2 to "Dad" for a year's subscription to the glorious old Globe.

WATCH MEETINGS.—The custom of watching the old year depart and the new year enter has been religiously observed by the Methodists from the days of Wesley. The custom is said to have originated in the following manner:

Wesly was informed that the Methodists in a certain locality were in the habit of holding meetings until a very late hour in the night, and was called upon to suppress the innovation. He declined to do so, but in order that he might be able to understand the matter more thoroughly he sent word to the brethren that he would "watch" with them on Friday night before the full moon. He was present at the appointed time and preached at eight or nine o'clock, and then continued the meeting with songs and prayer after midnight, in the midst of a throng of people. The meeting received such favor that it was introduced into other places and was held once a month, but finally came to be held annually, and the last night of the year was selected.

Bass in the Juniata.

On last Saturday night three hundred bass were placed in the Juniata river, about a mile and a half above town.—They were brought in a barrel from the Potomac river, and with such safety that only one out of the three hundred died. Our people are indebted to Messrs. Fishers, Col. Huyett, and others, for this enterprise, and it should be the interest of each and every one to see that they are protected. Nets, baskets, and all other like traps, should be done away with, and if parties will persist in using them they should be dealt with as the law demands. We can not expect to enjoy many messes of this delicious fish if greedy fishermen murder them wholesale before they have time to grow and increase.

SNAKY.—The Hollidaysburg Register is responsible for the following snake story: On Monday morning last, in Hollidaysburg, as Mr. C. F. Eccleston was going out of his front door, he found a small snake, measuring about two feet in length, trying to get up his front door steps. The snake can now be seen at his store. The night was very cold and windy, and where his snakeship came from, and how he lived, is past our comprehension. The most singular part of the matter is, that Mrs. Eccleston dreamt during the night that a snake was trying to get into the cradle to the baby, and she related the dream to her husband before he went out and found the snake.

CHURCH DEDICATION.—The New Baptist Church at Centre Union, in Oneida township, five miles from Huntingdon, will be dedicated on Sunday, January 23d, 1870. The services will commence at 11 o'clock, A. LORILLARD'S "EUREKA" SMOKING TOBACCO, is an excellent article of granulated Virginia; wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Merchants Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S "Yacht Club" SMOKING TOBACCO, is classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all." It is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and in weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first class Merchants Pipes. Try it and convince yourselves it is all it claims to be, "The Finest of All."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY CHEWING TOBACCO. This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.

Following the Fashions.

We find the following views of women upon the subject; "How far a woman of sense should follow the fashions," in Mrs. Kate Hunnibee's Diary, in the Hearth and Home:

Mrs. Lester.—I think all sensible women will agree with me, in the first place, that fashion should never be allowed to encroach on the domain of health, and, in the next place, that a woman of taste, as well as sense, will wear what is becoming to her, whether it is fashionable or not. Take Aunt Betsey, for instance, and dress her up in a gorgeous silk, put jewels on her hands and in her ears, roach her hair back so she can but just shut her eyes, and cover head with puffs and curls, would she seem at all our dear Aunt Betsey, that everybody knows and loves?

Aunt Betsey.—Guess I shouldn't know myself in such a rig as that, any more'n Mother Hubbard did. I don't b'lieve it's healthy to comb one's hair off their forehead and ears so in the winter-time; it would give me neuralogy right off, and earache, und I don't know what else.

Mrs. Field.—I agree with Mrs. Lester in her two propositions, and think, in addition, that one's dress should suit one's character. A woman who naturally despises dress looks ridiculous when tricked out with feathers and furbelows, with jewels and gay colors. Mrs. Lee, with her stately figure in her elegant velvet dress, is magnificent; but Mrs. Lester, we all agree, looks best in black silk, as does Aunt Betsey, in her brown merino, with white neckerchief. Let the humming-bird and the oriole, the blue jay and the canary, rejoice in the brilliant plumage God has clothed them withal, but we love our nightingale, our mocking-bird, our robin-redbreast, attired as they are in plainer robes.

Mrs. Lee.—I hope Mrs. Field does not think all women who dress fashionably no better than humming-birds and canaries among the feathered tribes?

Mrs. Field.—No offence intended to Mrs. Lee; for we know Mr. Lee buys her clothes and loves to see her elegantly dressed, and it is vastly becoming to her. But we plain women like to remember that the eagle, king among birds, has no brilliant plumage, nor the turkey, most delicious of domestic fowls, nor the snipe, nor the pheasant.

Mrs. Lee.—It's as natural for some women to love dress and fix themselves up, instefully, and keep their persons in exquisite condition, as it is for others to be indifferent to all these things. Charles Dickens, for instance, dresses magnificently, and we all know how smart he is, and Horace Greeley is just as smart in his way, but he doesn't look a bit the dandy, no matter how nicely he fixes himself up—and it's just so with women.

Aunt Betsey.—Mebbe it is, but I can't help thinking, when I look at girls' heads nowadays, that there's more hair outside of 'em than knowledge inside; and more puckers and folds and crinkles to their frocks than there are to their brains.

Mrs. Mix.—O, Aunt Betsey! you're growing old; you've forgotten how we used to primp when we were young, curl our hair, and lace ourselves, and rub our cheeks with mullein leaves to make 'em rosy, and bite our lips just before we went into meeting, so they'd be red and pretty.

SATURDAY NIGHT.—Some one thus beautifully says:

"Saturday night makes people human, sets their hearts to beating softly as they used to do before the world turned them into war drums and jarred them to pieces with tattoos. The ledger closes with a clash, the iron-doored vaults come to with a bang, up go the shutters with a will, click goes the key in the lock. It is Saturday night, and business breathes free again. Homeward, ho! The door that has been ajar all the week gently closes behind him, and the world is all shut out.—Shut out? Shut in, rather. Here are his treasures after all, and not in the vault, and not in the book—save the record in the old family Bible—and not in the bank. Maybe you are a bachelor, frosty and forty.—Then, poor fellow, Saturday night is nothing to you, just as you are nothing to anybody.—Get a wife, blue-eyed or black-eyed; but, above all, true-eyed. Get a little home—no matter how little—a sofa, just to hold two or two and a half, and then get the two or two and a half in it, of a Saturday night, and then read this paragraph by the light of your wife's eyes, and thank God and take courage."

☞ It may surprise some of our readers to learn that while a bar of iron, one inch in diameter, will sustain twenty-eight tons, and a bar of steel of the same size, will sustain fifty tons, a bar of spider's silk of the same dimensions, will sustain seventy-four tons.—This is based upon a calculation that a fibre of silk one four thousandth of an inch in diameter, will sustain fifty-four grains.
